My dear Miss Hodgson:

You were kind enough to send us a picture of "The Young Lincoln" and as we are just in the process of filing it we are wondering whether or not we should have placed upon the picture the size of the study. If you could give us the measurement from the head to the feet, we would be interested in noting whether or not it is of heroic size.

Very truly yours,

My dear Dr. Warren:

In reply to your letter of April 5, 1943, we are glad to supply the information for which you've asked. "The Young Lincoln" (Schoolcraft) is four feet long from head to foot and weighs one hundred ten pounds.

Again, we wish to thank you for the statue prints you loaned to us and to tell you we appreciate your kindliness about the damage.

Sincerely yours,

Harriet Ann Hodgson
